Louis The Great

For over seventy years the phrase "Red Seal" has been synonymous with high celebrity status in relation to performers in the field of serious music, both vocal and instrumental. The Victor Talking Machine Company adopted the red label from its English affiliate, The Gramophone and Typewriter Co., Ltd. in 1903. Columbia---Victor's chief competitor in this country followed suit cautiously in 1906, more confidently from 1910 on, with its own celebrity listing, employing a tri-color label; but its attempt to rival Victor in this exalted category may be briefly described as Too Little and Too Late.

However, an appreciable number of Columbia recording artists were unquestionably of Red Seal calibre (quite apart from the desperately exaggerated claims so frequently encountered in the Columbia catalogue); but all too many record collectors had become so conditioned to the red label as the sole guarantor of quality that many excellent singers and instrumentalists who recorded only for Columbia were either undervalued or virtually overlooked.

One of several outstanding vocalists who come readily to mind was Louis Graveure. Born Wilfrid Douthit (London, 1888), he achieved his first success in the English operetta The Lilac Domino. After a respectable London run, the production was brought to New York in the fall of 1914. It was only moderately successful, but the 26-year-old Douthit scored a decided hit, being credited by the New York Times with "a splendid baritone voice of great range."

The engagement ended, Douthit dropped out of sight for several months, then re-emerged at the outset of the 1916-1917 season as a concert singer under the name of Louis Graveure (adopting his mother's maiden name), his rather unimpressive appearance reinforced by a Von Tirpitz beard (the two-pronged variety named after its most illustrative wearer, the Admiral of Wilhelm II's U-boat fleet).

Graveure was once again an immediate sensation, and for more than a decade thereafter enjoyed a unique prominence among concert artists. After his recital debut, the Times commented on his "powerful voice that can thrill and impress by its virility, both in the lower range and in its pealing high notes." Another New York critic pronounced him "one of the great singers of the day," with "a glorious voice of wide range" and "every nicety in the use of it...a great store of genuine feeling, and beyond all this, he is such an enchanter with his musicianship that the effect of his singing is hypnotic."

In 1928 at the age of forty, Graveure sprang a double surprise on the musical world by reappearing, after a few month's preparation in secret, as a clean-shaven tenor. He made a triumphal tour of the United States during the 1928-29 season; the writer of these lines was privileged to hear one of the recitals and was duly impressed by Graveure's

- GRAPHOPHONE CONCERT POSTER -

We have recently had reproduced for our customers an authentic poster (circa. 1900) announcing a Graphophone concert. In color and appearance it is just like the original, which was found folded up inside the box of a "Columbia Grand" record!

Our reproduction is quite eye-catching and will add a great deal to your display; it is especially effective if framed.

Color: dark red on off-white paper (as original)

Size: 15" long, 7" wide

Prices: 1 - 50¢ ppd.

2 - 90¢ "

3 - $1.25 "

Posters will be mailed in a sturdy tube to avoid creasing for 10¢ extra (this is the cost to us for tubes).

And don't forget our other offerings...

Edison Diamond Disc labels - blank, for use in replacing those so often missing 40/$1.00 ppd.

Emerson Records - reprint of the first complete catalogue of their seven-inch records (1917); 24 pages with illustrations 90¢ ppd.

entirely successful transition to the higher range. Among several noteworthy feats on that occasion was the singer's complete mastery of the messe-di-voce (note taken softly, swelled out to forte, then diminished to piano) as applied to the high C in "Salut, demeure" from Faust, and the lusty abandon of his "La donna e mobile," sung as one of several encores.

At 43, Graveure embarked on yet another phase of his fabulous career, singing at the Berlin Opera from 1931 to 1938. As the Nazi regime grew increasingly oppressive, he transferred his activities to France from 1938 to 1940, then to his native England from 1940 to 1947. He then returned to the United States and settled in California where he conducted master classes for advanced voice pupils. Unhappily, his farewell recital (Town Hall NY, 1948) seems to have been little short of disastrous, as at sixty he was left with only a shred of voice for which even his superb technique could not compensate. He continued to teach until shortly before his death (San Francisco, 1965).

Graveure recorded exclusively for Columbia (1915-24 as a baritone; from 1929 as a tenor), which accounts for his being less of a household word than any number of inferior singers whose reputations were greatly enhanced---not to say overblown---through the kudos conferred by the Victor Red Seal.

As Columbia celebrity discs were issued in far less volume than their Victor counterparts, too many of them are rarities today. Even Graveure's fine electricals turn up only occasionally; when found, they can all be recommended.

As for his baritone acoustics, the following are outstanding (with year of release):

Nearly every collector must at some time have wanted to own the best possible performance of the Four Indian Love Lyrics. Here are three of them; but unfortunately the fourth side contains, instead of "Till I Wake," an excruciating item of which the best that can be said is that it is at least superior to "Mother Machree" or "Mammy"

General Notes: All selections are accompanied by orchestra except as noted.

In several instances, the take issued on the single-faced version was not the same as that used later on the double-faced Blue Seal issue. We have tried to show the instances in which this occurs for the benefit of those collectors who want to "complete" their holdings of an artist.

We have also designated "A" and "B" sides for the double-faced issues when copies were available to check. The absence of a letter following a 55000-series number means that we do not know which side is referred to.)

In the next issue of THE GRAPHIC we will complete this series by publishing an artist index to the 60000 and 70000 series.
